My brother Mark and I visited Uncle Milo last fall, just in time to enjoy a concert/ sing-along sponsored by his facility. The music from his era had us tapping our feet and recalling other days. He was a gentleman in the truest sense of the word--quick to laugh, share a hug or write a note. As the last of his generation of Andersons, I hope he didn't mind if we treated him as an elder statesman. He, in fact, exemplified all the best qualities of the descriptor "The Greatest Generation."
